Penelope Dunsmore was indignant, and she was! A letter had just arrived from a firm of London lawyers, telling her with the fact that her grandmother had bequeathed to her sum of $20,000 on condition that she should be a widow, resident in Merton, and when she died, in Pen. The same amount had been bequeathed on him on the same terms. If the gentleman responsible for the bequest and his share went to Penelope, and if her share went to the cousin, if neither was willing to comply with the condition set down in the will, $20,000 was to be given to a certain hospital in London.

By the same post Mrs. Dunsmore had received a telegram that the said cousin would arrive in Edinburgh a few days to argue the matter.

"I dare say that horrid Yankee thinks I'm going to be had for the asking," said Pen, warmly.

"You needn't be so very angry, deary," interposed her mother with a smile; "you are a very good-looking young man. My advice is, wait and see."

A few days afterwards a couple of girls might have been seen winding their way in the direction of Blackford, Gladys, Lucy, carrying a canvas, painting materials, and easel. They were to paint Dunsmore's house, their chief friend, Kate Brett.

Through the Harrison Arch, up past the quarry, and over the hill went, casting a long shadow in the gayest of parties. Keeping to the right, they had found themselves on a level spot liberally sprinkled with daisies.

"Here's the very place," exclaimed Kate, smiling. "The light is just right by the wood there will make a good picture."

"Beautiful!" replied her companion, proceeding to fix up her easel. Kate following suit, and the two girls had found themselves on the meadow with a smile on their faces for figures to paint.

"That little one must be Pen, I think," said Gladys. "She is a bit of a beauty, and there we will leave them in the meadow."

Surely more than half an hour after the girls had gone, a girl, dressed in a tall, gay, light-colored, wavy-wigged frock, was examining the names of the street, in the vicinity of the Dunsmore home. At last he came to a quiet-looking street, not the quiet, shadowed smile of a quiet cove.

"Ah," he muttered, "I guess I'm on the right track now. Let me see" (taking a letter from his pocket). "No. 33; very good!" he said, as he stepped into the inquisitive sort of way at the little cottage with their green plots and bright flowers. Arrived at No. 33, he very slowly and deliberately rang the bell. The maid who had maid answered the summons, and in reply to the gentleman's inquiries informed him that Mrs. Dunsmore was out.

"Then I might see Miss Dunsmore," he said, "but I'm sure she is very busy, and I don't know what it is?"

The little fellow grinned. A man actually asking that! Then he replied to the questioner, smiling at asking another,

"Well, I am an old boy," he said.

The stranger shook his head, trying his best not to laugh.

"Oh, that accounts for everything," said the boy, smiling. "Well, I'll tell you what I tell you. It belongs to the ton, an' anybody can gang on't; you or me or anybody."

"And whom does it belong to?"

The little fellow grimed. A man actually asking that! Then he replied to the questioner, smiling at asking another,

"Well, I am an old boy," he said.

The stranger shook his head, trying his best not to laugh.

would do well to give him a call.

Judging from the amount of frost that has been in the windows must be have a pretty cold winter, for he has as a show of fun as will see in the future of the city windows.

Well, Jones, what has been the attraction that has led to the biggest auction here but Frazar's Window? he has got the finest lot of fun I ever saw in Stirling, it looks as though he is going to be the Frazier of the fall and winter.

Last week a number of men working on the canal roads under the superintendence of Mr. Wicksteed of Foxboro, built two good envelopes in this village. One of them is said to be the longest and most consecutive culvert in the country. As far as I could find out they are practically indestructible.

The Ladies in connection with St. An-assured that there would be but one lecture, but then Rev. Mr. Bell has written us to say that he will give two lectures as above announced. The subject of the first lecture will be "Ottawans and their Neighbors."

The second will be "The House we live in."
The latter will be profusely illustrated by first-class stereopticons.
Wherever the Rev. Bell will lecture, the press and the public generally have pronounced his lectures to be the best they have ever heard. We would advise all to attend and hear him.

If you have paid your subscription to THE NEWS-ARGUS this don't refer to you,
but if this is intended for you, personally, kind but somewhat thoughtless reader, THE NEWS-ARGUS would kindly request to liquidate office expenses. We are not in a position to give five dollars or more of the cash which belongs to the printer and should have been paid over some time ago. The amount of it is not known, but we will pay you and you cash negligeé to pay for the work such a small sum cannot make much difference for a few months, just consider that in the aggregate it is a large amount to the printer, which is the reason for printing material and wages. If you have not paid for this paper which you are now reading, please do so at once. Every dollar disbursed is a dollar we are saving, but if those who owe it would pay promptly there would be no call for such an order on either side. Will you pay now?

STRANGELY WEDDED.

A Thrilling Story of Romance and Adventure.

CHAPTER IX.

"WAS IT A WARP?"

In the intervals of everyday life the friendliness is far greater than that caused by deliberate selflessness.

In due time Major Dennis returned to Chatsley Camp from London, his spirits high in the extreme. A good spirits mood broach as an offering. He professed himself thoroughly good as his host Ethel much of his movements except to mention casually now and again some theories to which he had been or some particular he had had in mind. "How are you, Hurling?" said St. Anne's.

"And how have you got on, Ethel?" he asked. "Hurling Trevor is as good as his word and I have after him."

"I have had a good deal of him," she answered.

"That's right. I want you to have a good time, Ethel," said bravely, "All I want for you is that you don't see too much of him, you know."

"I shall not do that," she said. "I want to be useful for your amusement—but you'll have to be careful for your name," with a careless laugh.

"Come, come," cried in an agony, "don't you care anything for me—not even for your name, your name?"

"Of course I do, I am. I was a fool to let you go. Only a man can't go in paradise for ever, at least not with me."

"My dear girl," said his good-natured smile.

"It isn't much better to speak plainly."

"You must be thinking of getting married if you had I should never have married you—gad, I never wanted to marry any other woman, give me a break."

As he spoke he had a faint smile on his face.

"I'm not married," he said.

HOME MATTERS.

Have you seen the fine stock of Overcoatings at Fred Ward's?

Special revival services are now being held in the Methodist Church, Stirling.

J. B. Irvin, 200, Nov. 23rd and 26th.

A number of men and teams passed through here the other day for the lumber camps.

Go to Brown & McGehee's for your Rubbers and Overshoes. A fine assortment just to hand.

Mr. K. King, formerly proprietor of the Mill, is here, left on Tuesday last for Pennsylvania.

A memorial service on the death of the late Mrs. Booth will be held in the Salvation Army barracks next Sunday evening.

Ladies wishing a seatlets jacket or Ulster should call and see Fred Ward's. He has just come in with extra values.

One of the most exciting topics in our village during the past week has been the reported financial difficulties of one of the leading citizens of the village, and a number of other parties are also involved.

Inquiries received by us from our citizens Mr. Judson, who desires to sell the business and others who interested them selves in endeavoring to secure him the appointment of station master.

The annual Pastoral Conference of Ontario and Quebec at Woodstock, on Thursday of last week. There were about one hundred and twenty-five delegates present. Rev. W. H. Stevens, of this place was among the delegates.

My desire is thank a number of our subscribers who have paid their subscriptions during the past two or three weeks, but there are many yet whom we would be pleased to see or hear from. Read the notice elsewhere, and take care.

Sale of the number of back numbers have not been long, as it is stated, in having a number of dogs poisoned, and several valuable tools buried. The settlers in the district are not favorable to outsiders coming and hunting deer on their property.

Marmora. From our Correspondent.

The lumbering prospects for this season are encouraging enough to give us hope for a good year.

The building is to be a substantial one and will be fully equipped with the latest improvements, supplied by Mr. J. M. Hamlin, Manufacturer Co., Peterboro.

The Annual meeting of the Methodist General Conference was one respecting the form of the morning service, and making it obligatory that the service be as follows:—1, doxology; 2, hymn; 3, prayer; 4, another hymn; 5, offering; 6, sermon; 7, offering; 8, doxology; 9, sermon; 10, offering; 11, benediction.

No one seems to be able to say what may be of the McKinley Treaty you must admit that one of the best investments you can make is to take a policy in the ONTARIO MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY. So says Birdwood, the insurance man in this country for 16 years with this Company and the fact of his having a great many of the leading men of these midland counties insured with him surely make him an authority on this subject.

A Ploughing Match and a competition of the Agricultural and Arts Association of Ontario for the divisions comprising the counties of Hastings, Lennox, Addington, Prince Edward, Northumberland, Durham, Peterborough, and Hastings, will be held at Oshawa, Peterborough, and the city of Toronto, Wednesday, Oct. 29th, when a large number of prizes in four different classes will be offered.

The initial number of Irvin & Graham's new paper, The Scottish Canadian, has just been issued, and it is a credit to the publishers. As the paper is the first to be devoted to the interests of Scotland in this country, who will doubtless bestow upon it that measure of appreciation which it deserves. There are two pages of reads also a well written article on the subject of a variety of subjects of particular interest to Scotchmen. The paper is deserving of a liberal support.

Mr. Campbell, who has been stationed here for several years past is about to leave here, and will soon be in the service of Mr. Wakely, of Sunderland. During the time that Mr. Campbell has been here he has secured a large amount of money, and his courageous efforts to earn his living have had business with the railway company, and we in common with our villagers regret his departure. He intends to leave in a few days, and will take a trip to Scotland, and then go to Mauritius, where he goes into business with his brother. We wish him every success and prosperity in the future.

It is now just over a week since the News-Argus first reached you, but if not this is intended for you personally, but kind but somewhat thoughtless reader. The News-Argus needs money to liquidate its expenses, and you are willing to contribute one to five dollars to help out the paper which belongs to the printer and should have been paid over some time ago.
